It's a big year for the Pacific Northwest: The 2015 U.S. Open comes to Washington and the Seattle-Tacoma area for the first time in June.

Chambers Bay, not to mention Bandon Dunes in the south, often steal the spotlight during the all-too-rare times the Northwest's golf scene is in the spotlight.

But golfers from Seattle to Spokane have all sorts of gorgeous (and, dare we say, humidity-free) golf courses to enjoy. There are some fantastic munis as well as lesser known and affordable resort courses that score highly in golfer reviews.

We found the top 10 courses in Washington state by Golf Advisor raters. Checking in at no. 1 is Loomis Trail Golf Club in Blaine, a resort located way up north, close to the Canada border on the Semiahmoo Bay. (It's sister course, by the way, Semiahmoo Golf Course, had strong reviews in 2014 as well, but fell just short in number of reviews to qualify).

The rest of the Top 10 includes a little bit of everything, from one of the state's newest courses to exemplary munis.
